(details on page eight)

Dear Collectors

Welcome to our second edition of the Stamp Bulletin for 2008.

After attending the Wodonga 2007 Philatelic Exhibition last December I now look forward to seeing the exhibits at the Canberra Stamp Show 2008 from 14 to 16 March. The exhibition in Wodonga, which was organised by the Victorian Philatelic Council (VPC) and the Australasian Philatelic Traders' Association, was a great opportunity to further promote the hobby throughout the region. In Canberra I hope to catch up with more stamp dealers and collectors.

In this edition we take a close look at the 2008 Australia Post Australian Legends Award stamp issue including a product that has not been previously listed – A Lasting Legacy: Legends of Australian Philanthropy. This book gives an insight into five very generous and worthy recipients of the award and is available only by mail order through the Australian Philatelic Bureau while stocks last.

I must congratulate the Australia Post Philatelic staff for the new international stamp issue being released in early March to cover requirements of the international postage rate rise. Gorgeous Australia features breathtaking views of some of Australia's unique landscape and will delight those receiving mail overseas. The designs are part of a collection of reserved stamp designs held by Australia Post to be issued at short notice when a rate rise has been announced.

Our Special Events stamp issues for 2008 will kick off with World Youth Day 2008. This gathering of the world's youth will be held in Sydney this year. A range of limited-edition products support the official stamp issue, as well as the previously released souvenir stamp sheet and postage paid envelope, featured in this Bulletin. The issue also includes the third postal and numismatic cover of the year. Stay tuned for the second Special Event issue – the Beijing Olympics – later in 2008.

A commemorative issue will celebrate the centenary of Rugby League in Australia. From humble beginnings, this football code has developed into one of the most dominant fixtures on the nation's sporting calendar. There are now 16 clubs represented in a national competition, and New South Wales and Queensland, where the popularity of Rugby was first apparent as far back as the 1880s remain strong rivals to this day and compete against one another in the annual State of Origin series.

Lest We Forget: Anzac Day will be released on 16 April ahead of the Anzac Day ceremonies. This poignant stamp issue recognises the sacrifice made by those who fought in time of war. Images from modern Anzac Day celebrations, features both young and old – at dawn services in Australia and Gallipoli, and at parades and get-togethers. This issue further supports the special place that Anzac Day holds in the hearts of Australians. The prestige booklet of Lest We Forget: Anzac Day tells the story behind each of the stamps which are presented in blocks of four. Using modern and historical imagery, the prestige booklet is an ideal keepsake of this very special commemorative issue.

Until next time,

The Australia Post Australian Legends Award allows us to recognise the contributions that outstanding living individuals have made to our national character and identity. This year's award honours five remarkable philanthropists. Without the generosity and support of philanthropists, many deserving organisations and individuals within the Australian community would not be able to operate and achieve the outcomes that they do.

Dame Elisabeth Murdoch AC DBE

Dame Elisabeth Murdoch is Patron of the Murdoch Childrens Research Institute and a life governor of the Royal Women's Hospital. She supports 110 charitable organisations annually.

Born Elisabeth Greene, she married Keith (later Sir Keith) Murdoch in 1928 and soon became involved with numerous community organisations, including the Royal Children's Hospital in Melbourne. In 1963 she was awarded a Dame Commander Order of the British Empire and in 1968 an honorary Doctorate of Laws by the University of Melbourne in acknowledgement of her contribution to research, the arts and philanthropy.

Victor Smorgon AC and Loti Smorgon AO

An industrialist and philanthropist, Victor Smorgon immigrated to Australia from Ukraine in 1927. Smorgon ran a kosher butchery with his two brothers and over the ensuing decades they built a vast family business empire encompassing steel, meat, paper, plastics, forestry and commercial property.

The Smorgons' enormous contributions to a wide range of medical and arts institutions in Australia include the Smorgon outpatients wing at the Royal Victorian Eye and Ear Hospital and the Loti and Victor Smorgon Gallery of the National Gallery of Australia, Canberra.

Lady (Mary) Fairfax AC OBE

Lady (Mary) Fairfax was born Marie Wein in Warsaw, Poland, immigrating to Australia with her parents in the late 1920s. She became a business woman, the owner of several dress shops in Sydney and married a family law solicitor Cedric Symonds. Her second marriage, to Warwick Fairfax in 1959, produced three children.

Lady (Mary) Fairfax was awarded an AC in 2005 for her services to the community. Her work through a wide range of social and economic activities includes medical research and health care, and the preservation of diverse cultural heritage. In 2002 Lady (Mary) Fairfax announced an intention to set up a $500,000 trust fund with the University of Sydney to aid the Sydney Cochlear Implant Centre and the following year donated $1million to the Victor Chang Cardiac Research Institute.

Frank Lowy AC

Recently named by the Bulletin magazine as the most influential figure in Australian business, Frank Lowy came from humble beginnings. Lowy was a Holocaust survivor and left Eastern Europe in 1946. He managed to study accounting at night while working with Palestine's Jewish underground during the day.

Lowy started out delivering sandwiches for a Sydney deli after his immigration to Australia in 1951. By 1974 he had become Australia's dominant shopping mall operator and quickly turned his sights to the American consumer. A noted philanthropist in a country not used to that tradition, Lowy established the Lowy Institute, the independent Sydney think tank, to which he has generously contributed $30 million. The University of NSW has bestowed an honorary doctorate on Lowy who also donated $10 million toward the building of the Lowy Cancer Research Centre at the University – the largest donation in the history of the university.

This new stamp issue has been produced to meet the needs of changes to the international postage rates. It also offers the opportunity to convey engaging and interesting images of Australia to those receiving mail overseas.

Grose River Gorge, NSW

This gorge is located in the popular Blue Mountains National Park, part of the World Heritage-listed Greater Blue Mountains Area, west of Sydney. The Grose River, one of two river systems that dissect the Blue Mountains plateau, has cut a deep and meandering route, creating walls that in places tower to around 500 metres. The image on the stamp shows Hanging Rock – a massive 100 metre high sandstone overhang that provides stunning views over the Grose River Valley, in Darug country.

Walpa Gorge, NT

Walpa Gorge is located in the World Heritage-listed Kata Tjuta–Uluru National Park, in Anangu country. Geologically linked to nearby Uluru, the ancient Kata Tjuta domes, also known as the Olgas, are composed of grey sandstone; the iron oxide in the surrounding desert sands has stained the sandstone red, giving the rocky formations their distinctive hues. Walpa Gorge cuts between two of Kata Tjuta's 36 red domes, one of which is Mt Olga, the highest of them at 550 metres above the plain. Explorer Ernest Giles gave Kata Tjuta (Many Heads) its European name in 1872, after Queen Olga of Wurttemberg. Visitors are forbidden to climb on these culturally significant domes, but they can walk through the six kilometre gorge.

Katherine Gorge, NT

The Katherine Gorge is located in the Nitmiluk (Katherine Gorge) National Park, about 300 kilometres south of Darwin, in the Northern Territory. While its name suggests it is a single gorge, it is in fact a series of 13 canyons separated by rapids that run some 12 kilometres. The waters of the Katherine River have carved the 60 metre high walls of the canyon through a sandstone plateau, in a geological process that is estimated to have begun some 23 million years ago. The site bears paintings by ancestors of the traditional Jawoyn owners and boat cruises provide tourists with magnificent landscape views.

Geikie Gorge, WA

The Geikie Gorge is located in north-western Western Australia, near Fitzroy Crossing, and is a spectacular feature of the Kimberley. It was named after Sir Archibald Geikie, a prominent British geologist, in 1883; its traditional Bunuba name is Darnngu. This 14 kilometre gorge has walls 30 to 50 metres high, created by the Fitzroy River, which travels through the limestone territory of the Geikie and Oscar Ranges. The river has cut through a Devonian period (406–360 million years BP) coral reef that once enclosed a shallow sea. The beautifully coloured cliffs are stubbed with marine fossil and coral deposits. The gorge can really only be visited in the dry season, as the waters rise by as much as 16 metres in the height of the wet season.

April 2008 marks 100 years since competition for the first NSWRL Premiership commenced. While rugby football had been played in Australia since the 1860s it was only one hundred years ago that Rugby League – Australia’s first professional football code – was established.

The early years

By the turn of the century some clubs paid their players, and these clubs eventually formed their own code of rugby, known as Rugby League. Rugby Union players were not paid until the late 20th century. A meeting was held at Bateman’s Crystal Hotel in Sydney on 8 August 1907 to organise professional rugby in Australia.

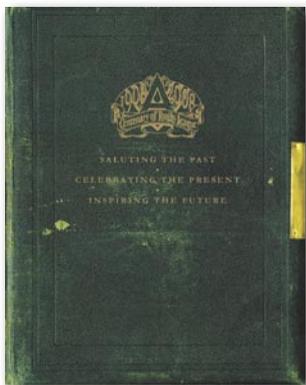

The meeting resolved that a New South Wales Rugby League (NSWRL) should be formed, to play the Northern Union rules which differed slightly from those of Rugby Union. This was the first time that “Rugby League” was used in the name of an organising body. Players were soon recruited for the new game, despite the threat of immediate and lifetime expulsion from the Rugby Union. It was not until 9 January 1908 that Australia’s first Rugby League club, the Glebe Dirty Reds, was established and the first season of Rugby League competition was played.

Following WWI, Rugby League quickly took over from Rugby Union as the most popular form of football in New South Wales and Queensland and the decision by the Rugby Union authorities to suspend play throughout the war is often cited as one of the prime reasons for the traditional dominance of Rugby League.

Rugby League today

From this humble beginning, Rugby League has grown into a national and international competition. It is the dominant code in Queensland and New South Wales and competes with the Australian Football League (AFL) for the title of the most popular football code in the country.

Since the 1980s a more national competition has evolved with 16 teams playing in National Rugby League competition in 2008. One of the biggest and most fiercely emotional competitions in contemporary Australian sport is the State of Origin series played once a year between New South Wales (the Blues) and Queensland (the Maroons). A series of three matches, it is now one of Australia’s premier sporting events. The attendance record for a single match of Rugby League is 107,558 for a game between Melbourne Storm and St George Illawarra Dragons at the Telstra Stadium, Sydney in 1999.

The design shows the relative size of these heavy hauling machines.

The biggest, the longest, the heaviest, the fastest. Machinery that surpasses the realms of the “reasonable” is often an object of real fascination. Such heavy machinery is not produced in Australia, but by large international companies. Perhaps not surprisingly, each of the brawny machines plays a vital role in Australia’s minerals industry; an industry that includes exploration, mining and processing.

Face Shovel

The gigantic face shovels that are so commonly associated with mining are an essential part of the industry. Used for excavation, these machines weigh some 700 tonnes and have an enormous bucket, with a capacity of around 60 tonnes. Working literally at the face of an open pit, these machines drop their payload into the back of the bulk hauler, which moves it to the crusher. Versions of these metal beasts get used in other industries, such as road making and drain digging.

Haul Truck

The giant 200 tonne capacity haul trucks that work on mining sites are the biggest in the country – for example, the cab of the Komatsu 830E sits some 18 feet above the ground – the truck itself being 23 feet high and the same width. The truck’s diesel engine drives an electric motor in each of its wheels, and it is these electric motors that really drive the vehicle. The fuel tank holds around 4,500 litres.

Road Train

The concept of the road train, linking more than two trailers behind a powerful cab, was devised in Australia, apparently by a Dutch immigrant in the postwar period. Traditionally road trains were used to transport large numbers of live-stock in remote areas. While road trains often consist of between three and six trailers, some trucks are known to haul nine trailers and are only allowed to be driven on specific roads in Australia’s more remote areas – the type of road each train can use is determined by its size. The speed limit for all road trains is 90 km/h with the biggest operating in Western Australia (WA).

1568002 first day cover (affixed)

1568220 maxicards (set of five)

Ore Train

The ore trains used by the mining companies in WA are the country's longest and sometimes heaviest. They are commonly 2km long and have three diesel engines with 200 cars, each of which carries 100 tonnes of ore. In June 2001, BHP Billiton Iron Ore ran the world's longest and heaviest train for the Guinness Book of Records; it stretched 7.4km, had eight locomotives and 682 cars, and had a gross weight of almost 100,000 tonnes – far removed from the normal size and weight of ore trains used.

The MS Berge Stahl

Ships are the world's largest moving machines and the iron ore carrier, the MS Berge Stahl, is the largest bulk carrier in the world. Built in 1986 by Hyundai, the carrier is a massive 364,767 deadweight metric tons and is managed by BW Bulk. Only two ports in the world are capable of handling such a giant vessel; the Europort at Rotterdam in The Netherlands and the Terminal Maritimo de Ponta da Madeira, in Itaqui, Maranhao, Brazil. The Berge Stahl visited Port Dampier in WA in November 2006.

TALKING STAMPS

WITH RICHARD BRECKON

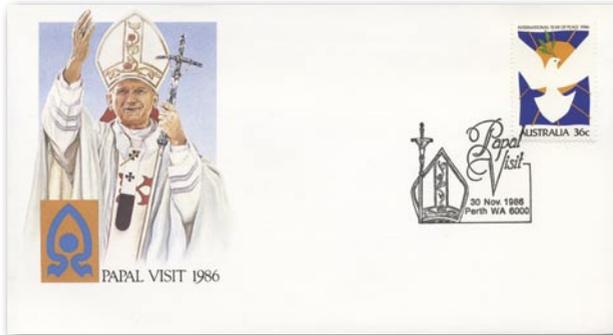

The World Youth Day stamp issue comprises the first Australian stamps to feature a foreign head of state. Although Pope Benedict XVI is widely known as the head of the Holy Catholic Church, he is also the Head of State of the world's smallest independent country – Vatican City.

Established by Treaty in 1929, Vatican City comprises a walled enclave in central Rome that occupies an area of 44 hectares (0.44 square kilometres). The population is about 900, mainly consisting of clergy working as officials, and the Swiss Guard, the personal bodyguard of the Pope. The Pope is ex officio the head of state and of government of the Vatican City.

Since 1929, the Vatican City has operated its own postal service and issued its own stamps. (Italian stamps cannot be used on mail posted in the Vatican City and vice versa.) More postal articles are sent from the Vatican City per inhabitant than from any other country in the world.

Born in Germany as Joseph Ratzinger, Pope Benedict XVI is the 265th Pontiff and the eighth German Pope. The Coronation of Pope Benedict XVI was commemorated on three stamps issued by Vatican City. A few weeks earlier three stamps were issued to mark the Vacant See (Sede Vacante), the interregnum between the death of a Pope and the election of a new Pope.

On 16 April 2007 Pope Benedict XVI celebrated his 80th birthday and the occasion was commemorated on stamps issued by Germany and Austria. The practice of countries featuring the Pope on their stamps developed during the Papacies of Paul VI (1963–1978) and John Paul II (1978–2005), both of whom toured the world extensively.

Among the countries that have issued stamps featuring Popes are: Argentina, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Central African Republic, Chile, Croatia, Hungary, Ireland, Israel, Mozambique, Nauru, Palestinian Authority, Philippines, Portugal, San Marino, South Korea, Spain, Sri Lanka, Ukraine, Venezuela, Zaire and Zambia.

Each of the previous three Papal visits to Australia – in 1970, 1986 and 1995 – have involved philatelic recognition through the provision of special postmark facilities. The first ever Papal Visit to Australia by Paul VI involved a single special postmark being provided at a temporary post office established in the Queen Victoria Building in Sydney from 30 November to 3 December 1970. The Papal Visit 1970 postmark, which did not feature a pictorial motif, was applied to more than 74,000 postal articles.

The first visit to Australia by Pope John Paul II involved nine special postmarks, each featuring a different pictorial design, provided in the locations visited by the Pope from 24 to 30 November 1986. A distinctive souvenir cover was produced by Australia Post and sold in sets of nine covers serviced with the postmarks. The serviced sets were originally sold for $5.04 each.

The second Papal visit by John Paul II was in connection with the Beatification of Mother Mary MacKillop. A single special postmark, as well as a cachet in gold ink, was used in Sydney on 19 January 1995. The occasion also involved the issue of a commemorative pre-stamped envelope featuring Mary MacKillop's Beatification.

The contemporary image of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II used for this stamp issue was taken at an official dinner held at Parliament House in Canberra during her most recent visit to Australia in 2006. The Queen wore her badge as Sovereign Head of the Order of Australia. A more detailed image of the Sovereign's badge appears on the $2.00 stamp in this issue.

The Order of Australia was instituted on 14 February 1975 after the recommendation of the Australian Government of the day to establish an Australian Honours System which would include the Order of Australia, the Australian Bravery Awards and the National Medal. Australians had previously been recognized for their achievement or meritorious service using the British (or Imperial) awards system.

Anzac Day, 25 April, is considered by many as Australia's most important national occasion. It marks the anniversary of the first major military action fought by Australian and New Zealand forces during World War I.

The soldiers in those forces quickly became known as the Anzacs – Australian and New Zealand Army Corps.

History was to remember the original Anzacs for their courage, often against insurmountable odds, and their readiness to help when called upon in the service of their country.

Every year Australians reflect and pay homage to the sacrifice of the original ANZACS, and to those who have followed in the service of their country.

On Anzac Day we participate in commemorative marches and services held at dawn – the time of the original landing. A dawn service is also held at Gallipoli in Turkey where an ever increasing number of Australians find their way each year to honour the sacrifice made by so many.

The stamps

The stamp series seeks to capture the face of Australia on Anzac Day, as we commemorate the lives of those that were lost in times of service to their country.

Each of the five stamps includes a line from The Ode which is synonymous with the spirit and meaning of Anzac Day in Australia.

*They went with songs to the battle, they were young,
Straight of limb, true of eye,
steady and aglow.
They were staunch to the end
against odds uncounted,
They fell with their faces to the foe.*

*They shall grow not old,
as we that are left grow old;
Age shall not weary them,
nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun
and in the morning
We will remember them.*

From the poem For the fallen
by Laurence Binyon (1869–1943)

Though failing in its military objectives, and despite over 8,000 Australian deaths, the Gallipoli campaign gave rise to a powerful legacy that has become an integral part of Australia's national identity and collective memory.

LEST WE FORGET — Anzac Day Remembrances

23 February to 14 June 2008. Curated by Elizabeth Gertsakis

The exhibition will focus on the emotional human experience of war by ordinary Australians as remembered through Anzac commemoration, both past and present. Included are photographs and artefacts from Melbourne's Anzac House collection (Returned Services League) and illuminations of significant stained glass war memorials from key Victorian churches. Unique images of monuments and memorials to Anzac Day from small country towns and voices from postcards sent by Australian soldiers to their families create a sense of contemporary reflection on the meaning of war.

The exhibition includes commemorative art and stamp issues from the National Philatelic Collection related to the history of Australians engaged in war.

TOURING EXHIBITION

ARTISTS OF STEEL – The Art of Australian Stamp Engraving

2 February to 27 April 2008. Curated by Richard Breckon

From the 1930s to the 1960s, the one-colour, intaglio process was in use for the production of Australian stamps. This was the era of the "artists of steel" – a few skilful craftsmen who hand-engraved the steel dies of intaglio stamps at the Note Printing Branch, Melbourne. Hunched over the die, the engraver had to cut the stamp design into the steel's surface, making cuts as shallow as one 500th of a millimetre and engraving the design in reverse! The extraordinary skills of hand engraving on steel, an art no longer practised in Australia, are celebrated in this exhibition.

International Year of Planet Earth 2008 Six Coin Proof Set

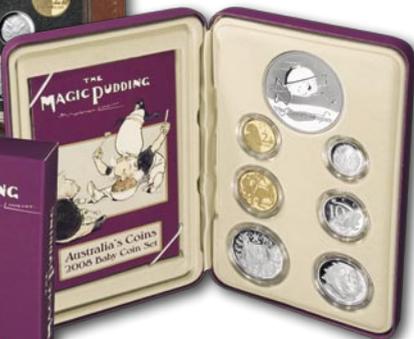

The theme of Planet Earth in our hands is close to the hearts of Australians and this collection is proof set our economy, environment and social health and well-being. It is the International Year of Planet Earth, a World Year for the 2008 Year Set. This set of six coins reflects the potential impact of climate change on all forms of life. The proof quality coins are proof from high grade materials resulting in an exceptional treatment of detail and a brilliant, mirror like surface.

The International Year of Planet Earth in 2008 is the biggest ever international effort to promote the Earth Science, its theme, Earth science.

The society reflects the United Nations desire to encourage worldwide understanding of our planet. The Year will see the funding of research and mutually beneficial programs to benefit all living beings on the surface of the Earth.

The work of governments has exceeded that of general world work. By investing this science in an understandable way, we have strengthened the importance of our responsibility for our planet. However, the progress required will be a long process of the Earth, both in terms of climate change, development and of resources, building the world, deep Earth, surface, sea and the origins of biological diversity.
