Dear Collectors

Welcome to the final Stamp Bulletin for 2008. The year has been an extremely busy one with Australia involved in a number of major events. I would like to take this opportunity to thank all our readers for their continued support of Australian philately, whether it's through the purchase of Australian stamps to add to a collection or through valuable feedback and support.

In this edition we ask you to tell us what your favourite stamps were of 2008. A special voting form is included so you can peruse the stamps from this year and have your say. Who knows, you may be lucky enough to win the special blocks of 1931 Kingsford Smith overprinted stamps, valued at around $3,000. Now that would really make someone's Christmas!

I am often asked what my favourite stamps were in a given year, and I can tell you this year is one of the hardest from which to choose a favourite. The Legends issue each year is hard to go past, as this issue always features great Australians that have contributed so much to the community – the Australian Legends of Philanthropy, back in January, are a case in point. The Organ and Tissue Donation stamp holds a special place in my view, as it's a great graphical representation of such a complex issue. I wonder how many people were reminded to register? Being a dog-lover, the Working Dogs issue has great appeal, while the Centenary of Scouting brought back fond boyhood memories. Aren't stamps great!

One stamp issue more than all others reminded me of how privileged I am to work in Australia Post in a job that allows me have some influence on the stamps we produce each year. That issue was Lest We Forget. The stamp launch I attended at Melbourne's Shrine of Remembrance was very special. This Bulletin, of course, also contains images of and information on some great stamp issues that form the final part of our 2008 program, including the Christmas stamp issues – Christmas 2008 and Christmas Island Christmas. The stamp issues are very different in both design and concept, with the traditional Christmas story told through the Christmas 2008 stamp issue and a Christmas of colour and fun presented in the Christmas Island stamp issue.

The Australian Film Institute (AFI) ran a poll recently to determine the favourite Australian film of all time as part of its 50-year celebrations. An issue of five stamps will be released on the 3 November, featuring the five favourite Australian films as voted by the public in the poll. Later in the year, and selected from these five films, Australia's favourite film will be given a special award at the AFI Awards ceremony, telecast on the 6th December.

Our 2008 Collection of Australian Stamps includes a unique sheetlet of the 2008 Australian Olympic gold medalists, as well as a single stamp from the Paralympian of the Year sheetlet. This collection and that of the Australian territories are a record of Australian culture, special events and anniversaries, and would be a great family gift for children or grandchildren. In this edition of the Bulletin there is also a range of gift and Christmas card ideas for the festive season. A very Merry Christmas to you all,

This 2008 Christmas stamp issue continues the tradition of Australian Christmas stamps featuring religious subjects. Three of this year's stamps celebrate the birth of Jesus through images of iconic figures from the Christmas story and the Nativity. Resembling a three-part altarpiece when shown together, the stamps combine photographic and design elements, and draw upon a range of techniques and artistic influences to offer a modern approach to a traditional story.

The sentiment of the Christmas story is captured in the devotional expressions and gestures of the figures, inspired by painters such as Giotto, whose religious frescos often depict people in profile against shallow architectural backdrops. Giotto – whose paintings have also featured on stamps – broke from the strict stylisation of medieval and Byzantine art to introduce human emotion and a quiet realism to religious art. In these modern stamps it is photography that enables this expressive dimension and brings the Christmas story to life.

The designer Melinda Coombes creates a calm, contemplative feeling through visual cues such as circles and arcs, and the use of classical proportions based on the Golden Mean, considered particularly pleasing to the human eye. Her design of the 50-cent stamp radiates out from a shell-like centre, a stylised yet open spiralling of semicircular forms that cradles the heads of Mary and Jesus.

Each figure is set against a colourful, decorative backdrop. The floral appeal of William Morris fabrics adds depth to the areas of flat colour. Every part of the design incorporates many layers – colour filters, and photographic, illustrative and tonal layers – that together convey the joyful spirit of Christmas. A stand-alone alternative stamp recognises the centuries-old ritual of decorating the home at Christmas, a tradition continued today by the common practice of adorning our Christmas trees with festive tinsel, lights and baubles.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND CHRISTMAS

31 OCTOBER 2008

50c.....Christmas Tree
$1.20...Robber Crab

In 1643, the East India Company ship the Royal Mary arrived off the coast of a remote Indian Ocean island, some 2,600km north-west of what is now Perth. Captain William Mynors was unable to make landfall, but he did have the honour of naming Christmas Island for the day of his arrival – 25 December.

Christmas Tree (50c)

In this design, the Golden Bosunbird wraps its splendid tail, like a strand of tinsel, around a Christmas tree decorated with seashells, Red Crabs, and a smiling starfish atop. Christmas Island is noted for its Red Crabs, which make a spectacular migration in their millions from the forest to the sea around November each year.

Robber Crab ($1.20)

Christmas Island is the world's most extensive breeding ground for Robber Crabs, the largest species of land crab worldwide. As their name suggests, and the stamp illustrates, they are known for their thieving habits.

FAVOURITE AUSTRALIAN FILMS

3 NOVEMBER 2008

- 55c.....The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert
- 55c.....The Castle
- 55c.....Muriel's Wedding
- 55c.....Lantana
- 55c.....Gallipoli

15911126 stamp pack

1591209 roll of (100 x 55c)

This stamp issue celebrates Australia's favourite local films, as voted for in a competition jointly organised by Australia Post and the Australian Film Institute (AFI).

The favourite Australian film overall will be announced in December 2008 at the AFI awards. An embellished sheetlet of self-adhesive stamps (10 x 55c) celebrating Australia's favourite film will be produced after the announcement of the award and will be available in December (refer to page 10 for details). This is the first time that an Australian stamp issue and special product have been produced based on the voting preferences of the Australian public.

Today, Australian films are recognised nationally and internationally. This is a far cry from the situation in 1958 when Australian feature film production had fallen to an all-time low. The rebirth of the Australian film industry began in the 1960s. Spurred on by the newfound Australian nationalism, the Australian Government established the Experimental Film Fund. In the early 1970s it established the Australian Film Development Corporation while the state governments established the likes of the South Australian Film Corporation.

The earliest film chosen by the public as one of Australia's favourites was Gallipoli. Produced in 1981, the film belongs to the group of films that heralded the renaissance of the Australian film industry in the 1970s and early 1980s. Although the film explored the country's past, its commemoration of the great battle of World War I clearly still resonates with Australian audiences in 2008.

A range of Australian people and places feature in the other four films, presenting a diverse picture of our culture. Muriel's Wedding portrays an “ugly duckling” leaving behind her country town to realise her dream of getting married and living in the big city. By contrast, The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert tells of the adventures of three drag queens in outback Australia.

The Castle takes a humorous look at an Aussie battler’s attachment to his suburban family home and his triumph over powerful corporate interests. A very different story of the suburbs is portrayed in Lantana, which explores four couples in Sydney drawn into a tangled web of love, deceit, sex and death.

These films show a huge development from the period in 1958. Then only 30 films were entered in the documentary, educational, advertising, experimental, public relations and open categories. The continuance of the AFI awards over 50 years is testament to the vitality of the Australian film industry, and the role the AFI has played in promoting Australian films.

There are six self-adhesive booklets of 10 x 55c (one for each of the movies and a mixed booklet). There is also a unique self-adhesive sheetlet format honouring Australia’s favourite film of all time (refer to page 10 for details).

AUSTRALIA'S FAVOURITE FILM ... but which one will it be?

The spotlight is on Australia's five favourite films as depicted in our stamp issue. One of these films will be named Australia's Favourite Film and presented with an award at this year's Australian Film Institute (AFI) award ceremony in December 2008. The five Australian films listed were voted by the Australian public in an online poll jointly organised by Australia Post and the AFI. All are great films but only one will be officially named Australia's favourite.

A special embellished self-adhesive sheetlet and sheetlet pack will be released after the award announcement.

TALKING STAMPS

WITH RICHARD BRECKON

One of the most interesting aspects of stamp collecting is learning about stamps that might have been, but never were. There have been instances where circumstances intervened to prevent a planned stamp issue from going ahead. Sometimes the stamps had reached an advanced stage of production before being abandoned.

In two instances involving major sporting events held in Australia in the past 50 years, stamps were fully printed before their planned issue had to be scrapped: the Melbourne 1956 Olympic Games and the 1987 America's Cup Defence at Fremantle, WA.

Melbourne Olympic Games, 1956

When Australia Post began planning stamps for the 1956 Olympic Games, four values were envisaged:

- 3½d, basic letter postage within Australia and to British Commonwealth countries
- 7½d, basic surface letter postage to countries outside the British Commonwealth
- 1s., basic air mail letter postage to nearer Asian countries
- 2s., basic air mail letter postage to most countries.

The 3½d and 7½d stamps were to be produced by one-colour recess printing at the Note Printing Branch, Melbourne. The 1s. and 2s. stamps were to involve multi-colour photogravure production by two European stamp printers – the first time since Federation that Australian stamps had been produced overseas. Work on the 3½d stamp commenced early, as it was to be included in a commemorative stamp booklet of 12 and the lead-time needed to manufacture the booklet was lengthy. The Olympic booklet would feature trilingual inscriptions (English, French and Spanish) to explain Australian postal information to Olympic visitors.

In August 1956, the Federal Government imposed increases in postal rates which meant that basic letter postage would rise from 3½d to 4d on 1 October that year. Consequently the 3½d Olympic stamp would be obsolete for letter postage. The timing of the rate increase made it impossible to manufacture a 4d Olympic stamp booklet in the available time. Before being abandoned production had reached the stage where 18 million 3½d stamps (enough for 1.5 million booklets) had been printed.

All the stamps were destroyed, except for two uncut booklet sheets transferred to the National Philatelic Collection. In 1987, 40 examples of the unissued 3½d Olympic stamp were sold in the Australia Post Archival Sale. (The 3½d stamp is priced at $5,000 in the Australian Commonwealth Specialists' Catalogue.) The other three stamps in the Olympic set were not affected by the postal rates increase and so these denominations were issued as planned.

America's Cup Defence, 1987

The victory of Australia II in the America's Cup (1983) meant that the Cup had been taken away from the New York Yacht Club for the first time in 132 years. It was brought to the Royal Perth Yacht Club, which arranged for the first defence of the Cup to be held at Fremantle in 1987. Australia Post issued three stamps in September 1986 commemorating the original with Triumph '83 followed by another four stamps marking the America's Cup in February 1987. A third stamp issue was planned: a 36c stamp for basic letter postage to commemorate the Cup's successful defence.

The proposed 'Victory' stamp was a calculated gamble. In an era when the instant stamp technology was not available, the Victory stamp had to be printed well in advance of the staging of the first race at Fremantle. As soon as the victory of the defender, Kookaburra III, was confirmed, the stamp would be distributed for release across Australia. Unfortunately, it was not to be. The America's Cup was easily won by the San Diego Yacht Club's challenger, Stars and Stripes, and the Cup's residency in Australia proved to be brief.

A small stock of full sheets of the unissued America's Cup Victory stamp were retained in the National Philatelic Collection. No examples of the stamp have been sold to private collectors.

The perfect gift for any occasion!
