

INTRODUCTION

The twenty-ninth edition of our Catalogue features a drastic overhaul of pricing which has been dictated by the law of supply and demand.

The marked upward trend of 1966-67 continues and although it is not deemed expedient to anticipate, it is hoped most prices herein will reflect a fair valuation of the Australian market.

The acute scarcity of better items in mint condition and several in fine used has placed the acquisition of such material beyond the pockets of average collectors and serves a warning that prices must harden further.

Whilst the editor is mindful of the interests of both the collector and the trade, the law of supply and demand is inexorable and the attraction of "good" postage stamps as an investment cannot be ignored.

Once again the editor sincerely appreciates the assistance readily given by the several persons concerned.

PLEASE NOTE: We are not a stamp dealing firm and do not supply stamps listed in this catalogue.
